NOTES ON THE BHAGAVAD-GITA

(Timeless Wisdom Collection Book 281)

Synopsis

This book has been made possible by the generosity of a Student who is a member of The United Lodge of Theosophists. The matter in it appeared in the Magazine Theosophy, published by that Lodge, in various issues from November, 1913, to February, 1917. Notes upon chapters One to Seven, inclusive, were written by William Q. Judge, and were first printed in his magazine The Path, appearing in various numbers from 1887 to 1895. These Notes by Mr. Judge were signed "William Brehon, F. T. S." or "William Brehon" - pen names used by Mr. Judge. The Notes for the remaining eleven Chapters were written by a Student of William Q. Judge, one who was personally taught by him and whose explanations and comments will be found in accord with the spirit and genius of his Teacher. No attempt has been made to alter or revise Mr. Judge's Notes so that they may be in book form. Quite often Mr. Judge devoted several articles, appearing in several different numbers of The Path, to a consideration of a single Gita Chapter, and the reader of this book will note that fact as he peruses its pages. The compilers have inserted rules to show where one such article leaves off and another begins. The reader will note the initials "W. B." or "B." signed to some of the footnotes: these stand for "William Brehon" or "Brehon," and were written, of course, by Mr. Judge. The form and size of this book are designed to conform to that of Mr. Judge's rendering of the Bhagavad-Gita itself, which has been found so convenient by thousands of students.
