Planning Democracy: Agrarian Intellectuals And The Intended New Deal (Yale Agrarian Studies Series)

Synopsis

Late in the 1930s, the U.S. Department of Agriculture set up a national network of local organizations that joined farmers with public administrators, adult-educators, and social scientists. The aim was to localize and unify earlier New Deal programs concerning soil conservation, farm production control, tenure security, and other reforms, and by 1941 some 200,000 farm people were involved. Even so, conservative anti-“New Dealers killed the successful program the next year. This book reexamines the era’s agricultural policy and tells the neglected story of the New Deal agrarian leaders and their visionary ideas about land, democratization, and progressive social change.

Customer Reviews

LOVE this book! This book helped me understand the work my grandfather (Bushrod Allin) and his fellow social scientists did to help farmers during the New Deal. This book is and will be a prized part of my collection of family memorabilia to be passed down to future generations of the Allin family.
